"Newfoundland has an area of more than $2,000 square miles, and is the affore practically half the size of Great Britain. Excepting only Coba, which barely exceeds it in size. It is the largest Island of the Western Hemisphere outside polar waters. With its lifts of brown stone rising 200 to De fect, broken here and there by deep fjords and bays, Newfoundland has a bleak and barren appearance which belies conditions in many parts of the rolling, timbered interior. Along a number of the streams are fertile val-leys in which agriculture and stockraising flourish. 'In late years mining, stock-raising the manufacture of wood-pulp and news-print paper, and a number of other industries have been developed in Newfoundland, but throughout its more than 400 years of history the cen-tral story of the island might be told in one word: fish.
